It wasn't meant to be like this. Sue, Mike and I were having coffee at Burke Street Bakery, in Sydney. It was 10:30am on a Monday and Mike was draining his latte ready to go back to a job he didn't like working in, for a boss who didn't value him and Sue was heading back home where she was picking up some work as a VA. What do you mean? I asked him. Neil, 10 years ago we knew we had a great life before us, we were ready to take on the world, we had a plan that would see both of us retired by 50 sitting on a beach in the South of France reading books and drinking Ros. Life happened. Neil, I got caught up with day to day bullshit, things that at the time seem like emergencies, but looking back, were just bumps in the road. I got disillusioned, I let my health go, drank a bit more than I should have and we didn't make time for one another. Neil, it's easy to look back and see where we would have done things differently. Sue said, But, it was never meant to be like that, we had hopes and dreams; I'm tired of getting up when I'm still half asleep. I'm tired of having to say yes when I want to say screw you. I'm tired of not having the money or time to do the things I want, no, I deserve to do. I'm tired of seeing the look in my kids eyes when I say, I can't afford it. Where did my life go? Now all we've got to look forward to is a shitty little pension and more work, probably until we're way too old to really enjoy ourselves, and you know what Neil, it sucks. He drained his latte and I could see the quiet desperation in both their eyes. The sad thing is I knew exactly how they felt. Do you need to go back to work now, or can I tempt you with a mid morning Croissant? Well, I should really get back Neil, we've got a lot on and if I'm not there the boss will miss me. I have a some client work I should really get done too. Neil Sue said I thought they were going back for sure, in fact Mike got up to leave, then I saw something stir in Sue, some long since felt defiance, the old Sue and Andy was there and Sue told him to order the croissants and she turned to me, and said Ok Neil, blow the diet today! and with that Andy went inside to order and I shared something with them that dramatically changed their life. Ysee right now, I know youre where Sue and Andy were. You know theres more, but youre not sure how to get it.[...]
